

Sociology 925: Sociology of Economic Change and Development Theory Spring 2019

Joe Conti
8112b Social Science Building
Office hours: Mondays 11-1pm
Email: jconti@ssc.wisc.edu

This class surveys classic and contemporary debates in the sociology of economic change and development, with an emphasis on exploring the theoretical assumptions underlying different perspectives.

This course is designed to contribute to achieving the following instructional objectives designated as priorities by the Department of sociology:

- Students will demonstrate a broad understanding of major theories, methodologies, and research findings in the sociological literature.
- Students will develop analytical thinking skills that enable them to evaluate information pertinent to their research question.
- Students will communicate in a clear, organized engaging manner, using language, methods, and critical tools appropriate to the social sciences.

Course Requirements: Students are expected to show up for and participate in every class having completed the readings.

Seminar participants will be expected to write either a research paper (20-25 pages) or a literature review (15-20 pages) focusing on a topic or debate within the field. Students will also briefly present their final paper on the final day of class.

Departmental notice of grievance and appeal rights. The Department of Sociology regularly conducts student evaluations of all professors near the end of the semester. Students who have more immediate concerns about this course should report them to the instructor or to the chair, 8128 Social Science (jraymo@ssc.wisc.edu).
